Appeal of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.—In the previous Winter has there been less expression of public concern for the poor in our city? We have not seen one. While the intelligent classes of society are greatly moved by the condition of families of soldiers are similarly provided for in the selection system and the liberality of our City Government, the residue of the needy, through the most numerous and pitiful of all classes, are left to their own resources. The names of EIGHTEEN THOUSANDS of this unfortunate class (18,000) are now on the Visiting Lists; and with the contractions of labor, as the Winter advances, the numbers steadily increase. With this increased mass of destitution to care for, the treasury of the Association is rapidly exhausted.
